

My Associate

Is She, or He, My Office Associate, or Girlfriend / Boyfriend?

<http://www.encouragementonline.com>

February 20, 2011

My Associate And Boss At Work

'I Want To Think Of Him Or Her As A Girl Friend Or Guy Friend? Now I'm Confused! Can You Help Me Sort Out My Emotions And Feelings About This? ...Someone Once Asked Me:

Here We Will Look At What or Who Is An Associate, In Our Social Life:

First, let's go back to the Origin of this Word "Associate."

From Latin 'associatus' we begin to see such concepts as 'to join' or 'to unite'. We see this in our World on many levels, especially in Business and Employment Situations.

Two or more people are grouped together on Company Projects or Endeavors. Sometimes there can come a good feeling between you two. You may even sense some kind of 'bonding' or Competing.

In some Time Consuming Employment you may find yourselves spending more and more time together. You can get used to each other, and if you are in any way attracted, hormones can start to cloud your thinking.

An Associate= A person who is frequently in the company of another. Sometimes becoming 'some One you like to hang out with. And do more Activities with apart from The Office'.

One of you may have a Significant Other or even be Married to a Spouse whom you are missing out on spending adequate time with. Or you may even be intentionally avoiding going home to be with him or her.

To Associate can be 'to join together as a Partner' or 'to connect together' or 'to combine with other Parts.'

By now we can See that Realistically we are just 'a part' and if We were not that Part someone else could very easy become That Part.

All someone has to say is, 'I no longer want to be Associated with you.'

When we realize how very fragile Associations can be, we see how very little Association's amount to.

(I Say this especially to Married Men and Women. So that they don't let Employers and Associates Loom as being more important than their Home Life and The One Who Makes Them Whole).

Association, is only a step above simply being brothers and sisters in this human race.

All Social Progress has it's Proper Steps. We need to be Careful in Each Step along the way.

—From Respecting Younger Men As Brothers, —And Younger Women As Sisters, —To Viewing Associates As Team Players On The Job. And Not Allowing Our Mind To Race Ahead Into Wrong Relational Thinking.

Then Leaving Our Associations At Work, And Coming Home To Our Significant Other.

This is also a very important Point to Remind Single Ladies or even Single Men who have Attractive Married Employers.

If your Employer Tends to Favor You, don't take that Personally, as if it was something more than mere Association or flirting.

The Married Boss Already has 'a life, and One Who Makes Him Whole.

You will never be anything that important to Him or Her. So save yourself from flirting, or being flirted with. It's just a game often played.

And we all like Associating with Interesting People, Especially Those of the Opposite Sex.

This is just normal healthy emotion in the context of being Human.

So let's Not Trip in this Arena of Associations.

But as Singles, we often Seek Companionship. I believe that Companionship is the Next Step Above Mere Association.

The Next Relational Step For A Single Is finding A Companion.

Someone who really likes to Spend Time With You even if what you're doing doesn't amount to much fun of itself.

COMPANIONSHIP Is the Goal. Being in Your Presence Is Their Reward. That Is What Your Companion Seeks Above All Things.

With A Companion We Begin To See A New World Without Loneliness!

